Description

Carnivora's Green tripe is amongst the most prized on the market. As expected it is smelly and green and our pets love the stuff even if we can't stand the smell of it! Coming solely from grass-fed animals, our Green tripe is the entire second stomach or the omasum of the ruminant animal – contents and all. These unique stomachs of ruminants have four chambers that systematically break down grasses with a slew of digestive enzymes, gastric juices, and amino acids. Also known as the "Bible", this is still a prized food source of many cultures. Green tripe

It has been found to have desirable calcium to phosphorus ratio of 1:1. Green tripe's pH is acidic, the protein averages 18%, and the fat is approximately 12%. It also has the correct proportions of Omega-3 and Omega-6 fatty acids. Another beneficial component of raw green tripe is digestive enzymes and probiotics. Digestive enzymes and probiotics aid in digestion, saving the body from expending so much energy when digesting a meal.

This means your dog gets the most nutritional benefit from his meals. Digestive enzymes also purify and cleanse the blood and remove toxins, parasites, and fungus. They also improve metabolism, hormonal function and boost the immune system.

Green Tripe may be fed once a day, several times per week or not at all; fed alone or mixed with whole animal or beef offal patties.
